KEY RECOMMENDATIONS ADDRESSED TO THE EU INSTITUTIONS, IN PARTICULAR THE EUROPEAN COMMISSION, AND EU MEMBER STATES:

What do we call for?

We call on the European Commission to propose an EU Framework Directive on Adequate Minimum Income and on EU Member States to guarantee everyone the right to an adequate, accessible and enabling minimum income, which is underpinned by a social and human rights approach.

Why do we call for it?

Europe is one of the most prosperous regions in the world. From a global perspective, people living in the European Union enjoy some of the best living and working conditions and the most comprehensive social protection systems. Taking it outside the global context, the situation looks different. In 2018, more than 109 million people in the EU were living in poverty and social exclusion. This amounts to 21.7% of the population - approximately one in five people.

Adequate minimum income plays a key role in reducing the depth of poverty and persisting inequalities in different areas of life. It forms the basis on which comprehensive, high-quality and universal social protection systems should be built.

With the recent COVID-19 outbreak, the EU is facing an unprecedented challenge and as with most crises, people in the most vulnerable situations are hit the hardest. The full magnitude of the pandemic’s socio-economic consequences will present themselves in the years to come. At the same time, social protection systems differ greatly from one EU Member State to another, and so does their capacity to cope with a crisis like this. Coordinated EU action is now more crucial than ever to prevent further social polarisation and poverty within the European Union.

An EU Framework Directive on Minimum Income would:

- Guarantee everyone’s rights to an adequate minimum income throughout their life cycle and enable peoples’ inclusion and full participation in society;
- Provide a level playing field by setting minimum social standards across EU Member States;
- Support social and economic upwards convergence within and across the EU Member States.
What should the EU Framework Directive look like?

Key recommendations to the European Commission

The EU Framework Directive should set out minimum quality standards to guarantee everyone who needs it, an adequate minimum income for as long as it’s needed. It should:

1) Elaborate common principles and definitions on adequacy, on accessibility/eligibility and on the enabling character of minimum income schemes/benefits and provide for effective systems to monitor progress on these principles with country-specific recommendations in the European Semester process and through the Social Scoreboard.

2) Define the at-risk-of-poverty (AROP) threshold (60% of median disposable household income) as EU-level indicator for adequacy and underpin it with national reference budgets, as the achievement of the EU poverty threshold alone will not always be sufficient to lift people out of poverty. Reference budgets more adequately reflect the living standards in a country by considering the actual price levels of goods and services.

3) Fully address existing barriers to take-up of benefits, including in relation to issues of coverage and duration of benefits, administrative hurdles and stigmatisation.

4) Ensure a rights-based approach to minimum income and avoid making it conditional on or treating it as a disincentive to work. Conditionality of this type is a direct contradiction to a rights-based approach.

5) Contain a robust non-regression clause in view of existing minimum income schemes and benefit levels.

6) Target EU funding to support the development of national minimum income schemes and continue to carry out research, awareness-raising, mutual learning and peer review activities on how to ensure the adequacy of minimum income and their non-discriminatory access, the access to quality and affordable essential social services, policies to positively support job search and labour market inclusion and methods to improve the participation and involvement of people experiencing poverty and social exclusion.

7) Afford better visibility to and mainstream EU-level indicators and benchmarks on minimum income via the Action Plan on the Implementation of the European Pillar of Social Rights, the European Semester, the work of the Social Protection Committee and of the public services network on minimum income. We also call on the European Commission to make progress on agreeing on a common EU wide framework and methodology on reference budgets.

8) Provide for the meaningful involvement of civil society organisations and people experiencing poverty in all EU-level policy and legislative initiatives.
How should Minimum Income Schemes be implemented at the national level?

Key recommendations to EU Member States

National Minimum Income Schemes/benefits should take a rights-based approach and ensure that people are not trapped in a cycle of poverty. They should:

1) Be a key part of national universal social protection systems and in multidimensional and integrated anti-poverty strategies.

2) Be a part of an integrated and person-centred active inclusion approach with a level sufficient to ensure dignified lives and full participation in society.

3) Be combined with the quality and affordable services and the promotion of labour market integration and quality employment for those who are able to work and are of working age.

4) Address existing barriers to the non-take-up of benefits, including exclusionary eligibility criteria, negative conditionalities and stigmatisation.

5) Incorporate requirements on EU Member States to monitor and, if need be, adapt existing provisions to ensure the level of benefits corresponds to the rising costs of living and to different needs of individuals, households or groups. For this purpose, the actual cost of living for different household types should be used through a ‘reference budget methodology’.

6) Be closely linked to other key social rights, such as accessible, affordable, and quality social services, decent and affordable housing, quality education and affordable healthcare.

7) Provide for equal access in practice and not only in theory, especially for groups in vulnerable situations.

8) Have simple administrative procedures.

9) Provide for the right of appeal and effective adjudication by independent bodies.

10) Ensure a sustainable funding base for the adequacy of national minimum income schemes/ benefits, based on income redistribution mechanisms and progressive tax systems.

11) Ensure that adequate minimum income schemes are set in a positive hierarchy with fair and decent minimum wages to avoid creating so-called poverty and inactivity traps.

12) Provide for the meaningful involvement of civil society organisations and people experiencing poverty.

New impetus was given to the EU’s social agenda in November 2017 when the Council of the EU, the European Parliament and the European Commission jointly proclaimed the European Pillar of Social Rights.

The European Pillar of Social Rights establishes 20 principles and rights as a compass for a more social Europe and is divided into three chapters: 1. Equal opportunities and access to the labour market, 2. Fair working conditions and 3. Social protection and inclusion.

Principle 14 of the Social Pillar lays the foundation of the right to an adequate minimum income and states:

‘Everyone lacking sufficient resources has the right to adequate minimum income benefits ensuring a life in dignity at all stages of life, and effective access to enabling goods and services. For those who can work, minimum income benefits should be combined with incentives to (re)integrate into the labour market.’
