"At the moment, the support given to qualified formal caregivers working in the field of dementia is basic. There are a number of shortcomings when we have to work with specific groups of elderly patients. Unfortunately, this group equates to around 40–60% of people suffering from moderate or severe dementia.

The resources created by App4Dem have increased our knowledge and ability to provide care and support to a greater and more complex range of dementia patients."

App4Dem exists to improve the knowledge and expertise of caregivers working with people living with dementia.

Through their innovative resources, such as their training curriculum on "Specialised Care for People with Dementia," care professionals, including educators, are able to obtain information to respond professionally to the specific and unique needs of their patients.

People living with dementia often experience abuse and neglect. App4Dem is working hard to improve the quality of care that's received by people with dementia - ensuring that their rights and wellbeing are safeguarded against malpractice.
