"Young carers continue to be invisible due to the fact that many families do not recognise their children as 'carers'. Some children also don't identify themselves with the caring role and there can be a degree of reluctance and anxiety from families in disclosing caring responsibilities. Together has made sure that many young people who assume caring responsibilities don't feel overwhelmed or trapped. We ensure constructive communication at family level and work to advocate for the rights of young carers at EU decision-making tables."

A pan-European project, Together supports the social inclusion and engagement of young carers. The overall objective is to reduce and eradicate negative impacts for young people with caring responsibilities.

Through conducting research on existing resources for young carers in each of the partner countries, Together has created fresh and innovative tools and materials designed to better support young carers, their families and practitioners.

Crucially, Together's unique training workshop curriculum designed for young carers and their families is developing and fostering open dialogues on the caring relationship.
